Enhancing Vocabulary Using Brain-Based Instruction

What does your data say about students' vocabulary acquisition? Do you need to rethink your vocabulary instruction to increase student achievement? If so, then neuro-education and brain research to the rescue!

Educators will explore how the three regions of the brain impact the memory pathways of the learners. Participants will explore an improved sequence of instruction that impacts students' long-term memory of vocabulary concepts.

The instructor will guide experiences for new classroom-ready activities that support a student-centered environment which will improve engagement and reading comprehension.
