

Supporting Specially Designed Instruction: A Guide for Administrators

WHEN

September 4, 2025
8:30 am – 3:30 pm

Registration Deadline: September 1, 2025

CLASS DESCRIPTION

As an administrator, do you know what your Special Education teachers are required to do according to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA)? The answer is Specially Designed Instruction (SDI). This course is designed to equip administrators with a deep understanding of SDI, its essential role in supporting students with disabilities, and the critical components that ensure compliance and effectiveness in the classroom. Throughout this course, administrators will explore the fundamentals of SDI, including what it looks like in action and how it should be tailored to meet the unique needs of students with disabilities. You will learn how to evaluate and support your Special Education teachers by recognizing the key strategies used in SDI and understanding how these approaches are applied to individual student needs. Additionally, participants will leave the course with valuable "look-fors" and resources to effectively support teachers as they design and implement instruction for diverse learners. This course will provide administrators with the knowledge and tools necessary to enhance instructional practices and ensure that all students receive the support they need to succeed. By the end of this course, administrators will have a clear understanding of SDI, how to evaluate its implementation, and how to support their Special Education teachers in delivering tailored, effective instruction for students with disabilities.
